FINANCIAL CHRONICLE: It is not to be denied that the demands for higher wages which are being made in nearly all sections of the country and in all branches of industry are an element in the situation that invests the future with some doubt and uncertainty. It is not that these moves are symptoms of unrest and discontent, or that they betoken any general or prolonged trouble between capital and labor, but simply that they add to and increase the cost of production where prices now are on a scale that leaves but like tle margin of profit to the producer.'

THE New York Commercial Bulletin, in an able article on the "Diversified Crops" resolution of the Jackson Convention, says: "The convention, singular to say, bestowed no attention to what seems to us two important points economy in the raising of cotton and lessening the cost of subsequently handling it. Possibly these could have been agitated with more satisfactory results than are likely to attend the policy of decreased area. Reform in the credit system also might have been taken in hand to advantage, though a radical change in this respect can only be brought about by persist-ent and business-like methods.

C. L. GREENE & Co.'s report on cotton futures yesterday says: The break of 16:a 18 points on contracts to-day, while not remarkable, as fluctuations have gone up of late, was somewhat significant in the absence of any important recovery, and the ovement appears to have received at east a temporary check. The liberal shading at Liverpool was the most demoralizing influence, especially as the selling there is known to have been done principally by recent longs, but the condition of the yarn markets was The close was a trifle steadier, but only because there appeared to be an indifferent feeling generally and "bulls" improved the opportunity to add a few points.

THE Annual Review of the Trade of Memphis, compiled by Segretary E. A. Keeling of the Merchants' Exchange, is now in press, and will be ready for distribution to the membership and general circulation in about ten or fifteen days. From advance sheets seen it promises to be a very creditable publication as it relates to the general interests of Memphis, the prominent features of which will be, after a careful review of the various departments hungry mouths. No more deserving ful review of the various departments charity than this exists anywhere, and of trade, a verbatim report of the final result of the old city debt commissioners, the annual report of the president of the Board of Health, the chief of the Fire Department, a re-view of the city's railway and river transportation facilities, and the great advantages possessed for manufactur-ing investments. The report for 1885 will be more comprehensive than any previous report issued under the auspices of the Merchants Exchange or any other commercial organization.
